

KGB Jewish Nazis Set Up Reagan for Assassination

by Joseph Brewda

April 30 (NSIPS)—As President Reagan prepares to leave for his controversial trip to West Germany, U.S. intelligence sources have confirmed to us that there is a high-level security threat, by Soviet-controlled agencies, to his scheduled stop at the Bergen Belsen concentration camp. The President should cancel that facet of his trip.

The threat to Reagan's life has been set up by a massive propaganda war against him, every feature of which has been directed by networks created and controlled by Soviet Russian intelligence.

Soviet control over this apparatus is kept up through three main kinds of institutions: 1) those directly created by Russian intelligence as identified arms of the Soviet Comintern or its successor networks, such as the West German Vereinigung Verfolgten des Naziregimes (VVN—The Association of Those Persecuted by the Nazi Regime); 2) Jewish holocaust survivors' organizations, many of whose leaders were "kapos" for the Nazis during the war, and are now subject to Soviet blackmail; and 3) networks such as the Israeli "Terror Against Terror" underground, known to be massively penetrated by KGB agents. This last Soviet capability is augmented by the fact that a faction of the Israeli government is solidly allied with the KGB to undermine U.S. interests worldwide.

The VVN, which has been voicing Soviet charges of "German revanchism" long before Reagan ever planned his current trip, is a direct KGB front, molded by the late top Soviet ideologue Mikhail Suslov as the reorganized West German Communist Party, which was banned after the war.

The VVN is covertly steered by Marcus Wolff, deputy director of the Stasi (East German intelligence), through Heinz Galinski, the unofficial chairman of West Berlin's Jewish community. The VVN's self-identified basis of existence is to protest both the alleged protection of former Nazi war criminals by U.S. intelligence, and the alleged rise of German neo-Nazism. The present ludicrous campaign against President Reagan was plotted at a VVN conference held in Moscow in March 1984, among other locations. This theme was then funneled into the West through "Nazi hunter" Simon Wiesenthal; Heinz Galinski; and such self-identified U.S. Nazi-hunters as Charles R. Allen, Jr., former editor of "The Nation," and a top figure in the New York U.S.-G.D.R. Friendship Society.

In the U.S., the VVN-Searchlight network includes "The Hammer," a periodical tied to the National Anti-Klan Network of Lyn Wells. An ex-leader of the Maoist terrorist October League, Welles is a "handler" of such KKK figures as Jerry Ray, James Earl Ray's brother.

This same apparatus is closely tied to Hitler admirer Muammar Qaddafi's protege, Rev. Jesse Jackson. Through the VVN, among other KGB institutions, Jackson has close-knit ties to the neo-Nazi Green party of Germany, a party indirectly funded by Moscow, which openly praises Hitler as a "brother," and is one of the Russian threats to Reagan on his trip.

KGB Controls 'Nazi Hunting'

One of the KGB's most reliable channels in the Bitburg controversy is Simon Wiesenthal, the so-called leading Nazi hunter in the world. Funded by Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands, the Vienna-based Wiesenthal keeps a list of some 25,000 alleged Nazis at his Documentation Center, and claims to have dedicated his life to bringing these Nazis to justice.

Reunion of America's German-Born Scientists

Pictured here at their 40-year reunion in Huntsville, Ala. last week, holding a photo of Wernher von Braun, are scientists from the original team that launched the U.S. rocket and space program back in the 1940s and 50s. Without these scientists, the U.S. space program would not have existed. For the story of what happened at their reunion turn to page 5.
