

International Intelligence

British intelligence announces housecleaning

The British have announced a major reorganization of their intelligence services. Characterized by the London Times as the "biggest shake-up since 1939" the reorganization involves the removal of the Foreign Office from the chairmanship of the Joint Intelligence Committee, a position it has held since World War II. A new full-time chairman for the JIC will be appointed in the near future. New appointments in other intelligence divisions such as MI-5 and MI-6 are also expected some time this spring.

Also, the head of the Bank of England, Sir Gordon Richardson, has recently been replaced in that post by a member of the Black Oligarchical Cecil family. One of Britain's oldest and largest insurance companies, Lloyds of London has also recently been reorganized: about two dozen of its top directors have been ousted. The key aspect of this reorganization is that Lloyd's will be put under Bank of England control, in other words under the control of the Cecils.

Spaniards gather to hear the LaRouches

"The economic future of Spain will depend upon Spain finding an effective role in the economic development of Ibero-America," Lyndon H. LaRouche told a select gathering of economists, politicians and diplomats Dec. 17. It was the first time that LaRouche and his wife, Helga Zepp-LaRouche, chairman of the European Labor Parties, made a public presentation in the capital of Spain.

LaRouche explained that the "problem that Spain faces in the long term is to develop a Spanish capital-goods industry which would be the economic resource for expanding trade with Ibero-America. Spain must break free from just exporting foodstuffs and cheap shoes."

"Spain has a historic, decisive relationship with Ibero-America—a relationship which is widely accepted in Spain and Ibero-America." The historical fact is, LaRouche said, that "Spain represents Europe to Ibero-

America, and Ibero-America to Europe," LaRouche continued.

The LaRouches' short stay in Spain coincided with a visit to Madrid by Secretary of State George Shultz, who visited Spain as part of his recently concluded European tour. LaRouche had only one thing to say about Shultz: "Any American official that says that there will be a slight economic recovery of the U.S. or European economies in 1983, is a liar. . . ." He called the U.S. State Department the "Washington branch of the British Colonial Office for at least the last 30 years."

Madrid will be the site for the celebration of one of 50 international conferences sponsored by the Club of Life in February in anticipation of the New Delhi Non-Aligned Nations meeting in March.

Mexican fascist threatens EIR writer

Tim Rush, EIR's chief Mexican analyst, was the object of a recent death threat delivered in the pages of Impacto magazine in Mexico. The threat came from Mauricio Gomez Mayorga, an associate of the anti-Castro terrorist group Alpha-66, and other fascist groups operating in Mexico.

Rush identified Gomez Mayorga as having participated in a series of secret September 1982 meetings to plan the political-military overthrow of the Mexican constitutional state and its nationalist leadership (EIR, Nov. 2, 1982). The meetings were organized by the international Nazi networks ensconced in the drugs-and-weapons traffic in Ibero-America, whose historical ancestors include the Cristero rebels of the 1920s.

"For your information and your discomfort, Mr. Rush, I am one of those people who don't let things go by, and who never forgive an affront, and I have lots of experience fighting enemies," Gomez Mayorga wrote. He didn't deny Rush's charges, but only observed that he, Gomez Mayorga, was too young to have been a Cristero. In the same publication he urged that fascists intend "not to die for Mexico, but to kill for Mexico."

Impacto is a popular platform for drug and sex perverts, hard-line "free-enterprise" economists, and "Cristero" religionists who advocate rebellion against the government.

Andean meeting invokes Botanical Expedition

The Andean Labor Party (PLAN, collaborators in South America of Lyndon H. LaRouche,) celebrated the beginnings of a new "independence" movement on the continent with its Dec. 18-19 conference in Bogotá, Colombia entitled: "A Second Botanical Expedition: The Ibero-American Response to the World Strategic Crisis."

Nearly 200 years ago, leading humanists from Spain, other Western European nations, and Ibero-America collaborated around a project designed to establish the basis for independent republics in the New World. Central to that effort was a great scientific exploration known as the Botanical Expedition.

PLAN Secretary-General Maximiliano Londoño described LaRouche's "Operation Juárez" as "the key weapon of the Ibero-American nations" for establishing the kind of economic and political alliance which can make a scientific and cultural renaissance along the lines of the Botanical Expedition possible.

Said Londoño in his keynote address, "Our region has immense natural wealth and installed technological capacity, but the International Monetary Fund and World Bank prescriptions for debt payment are creating the conditions for genocide in our countries. Today we find ourselves in a phase change and the solution is 'Operation Juárez'."

The conference was attended by PLAN members and collaborators from Peru, Venezuela, and Colombia, as well as by guest speakers from the International Caucus of Labor Committees of the United States and Europe.

Peruvian: nuclear subs for Ibero-America

Ibero-America needs not only nuclear energy for electricity, but, given the experience of the Malvinas war, for powering submarines for its defense, a former Peruvian